Interstate Wedding Woolshed Dance

With her shadow lace dress a shining column of white in the dusk, Miss Aislinn Treloar was a smiling bride in St. Matthew's Church, Marysville, early on Saturday night.

CLAIRE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Treloar, of Toorak Gardens, was married to Mr. Philip Frederick Stuchbery by the Rev. T. Hayman. A crown of overlapping white organdy petals held her billowy tulle veil, which fell over her simply cut dress, made with a high round neck, long, light sleeves and a waisted waistline.

Mrs. Peter Leake, her matron of honor, in off-white lycra, a princess style, with full, tulle-trimmed sleeves, the dropped waistline.

After the ceremony, Mrs. Treloar was hosted reception in 30 Dequetteville terrace, Kent Town. She wore an orchid corsage on her blue-green dress, and her little hat was a halo of autumnal petals.

The bride and groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Stuchbery, of Portland, Victoria, will live at Casterton, Victoria. Mrs. R. H. Stuchbery's dress was muted Parma violet worn with a small washed ecru.

Fun At Woolshed

With an orchestra to "beat it out" more than 100 young people rocked and danced to a lively term-lit woolshed dance in Bendara on Saturday night.

Near the old stable, Mrs. M. G. Millman and her daughter Merrilee served a sizzling hot supper of chops and sausage to their guests.

Novely woolshed decorations included old car wheels, colorful record covers and balls of wool. Pine branches were packed in the rafters overhead and beaded bays were transformed into tablecloths.
